

Limiting the ability to copy digital or high definition television can only hurt the industries themselves. In my opinion, recording any broadcast or other media for personal viewing at a later time is no different than viewing the broadcast when it is "live". I am hard pressed to find a reason to record much of what is broadcast, but if the equipment is available and I choose to record something for viewing in the future, I should be able to do it. Once the signal leaves the tower, it is fair game. Putting up with the commercials should be payment enough!
